

Foreword

This publication is intended primarily for use by those persons involved in the construction of all types of public improvements as well as City Personnel in order to impose uniform requirements. This manual is the third volume of the Public Facilities Manual and proper use will require reference to Volume II, City Standards. While every attempt has been made to address all requirements, this manual may not necessarily cover all special or unusual circumstances. All development activity is subject to the requirements of Chesapeake City Code, applicable State and Federal Codes, as well as those dictated by sound engineering and construction practice.

This manual represents a significant effort by City staff members and was developed with the input of the engineering consultants representing the development sector. While many of the sections were revived from contract documents from past City projects, old contract documents should not be used in place of this manual since several sections have received significant revisions. The City of Chesapeake accepts no liability for the use of this manual except that required in the execution of a City contract or for the construction of public improvements pursuant to an approved development plan.
