

ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATIONS USE AND RETENTION

Electronic communication services are provided to employees in order to support open communication and research through the exchange of information and to provide the opportunity for collaborative government related work. The City of Chesapeake provides electronic communications (email, internet and intranet services, fax and voicemail) to City employees at the City's expense for use in conducting the City's business. It is expected that all City employees conform to the provisions of the City policy regarding the use of these services.

For additional information, please refer to Administrative Regulation 1.13.